What is Workers Compensation Insurance?

Workers Compensation is a compulsory insurance scheme managed under state-based legislation that provides financial assistance to employees who sustain an injury at work.

Workers Compensation Insurance covers an employer for their legal liability to employees by following their applicable state or territory legislation and is compulsory for all employers to arrange.

If a work-related accident or illness occurs, work health and safety laws require that workers can access first aid, workers' compensation and return-to-work rehabilitation.

A Workers Compensation Insurance policy is designed to cover the wages of your workers if they suffer a work-related injury. The policy also includes cover for medical expenses, treatment and rehabilitation costs.

The State Insurance Regulatory Authority (SIRA) is the NSW Government agency responsible for regulating the NSW workers compensation system. There are three types of insurers in the NSW workers compensation system: icare; self-insurers; and specialised insurers.

icare is a NSW Government agency that provides insurance and care services to statutory authorities and to people with injuries under various compensation schemes.
